- Thought provoking.
- Marvellous
- Hated the 'Last Supper' scene. Apart from that I thought the film was brilliant. Very well done and excellent photography.
- Great start to the season.
- Better about war than most 'war' films!
- Brilliant photography
- Tremendous. A Graham Green for our time. Bit rough on the Islamists (who have been known to show considerable mercy amidst their own brutality). But a marvellous collision of worlds, politics and theologies.
- Beautifully paced, powerful and thought-provoking.
- Well observed and very true to reality.
- Almost made me reach for my missel!
- Riveting

- Difficult to discriminate between it as a reportage and a dramatisation. Nothing has moved on since then sadly.
- How religion is distorted to justify violence.
- Some excellent scenes.
- Atmospheric

- I hope this doesn't set the scene for the season – quite dismal (but enjoyable nonetheless).
- Long in parts, interesting.
- Too long – but some beautiful photography – an interesting and moving story, but sometimes difficult to understand what was happening.

- Much too long in relation to the content.

- Very moving, beautiful – too long. Lovely to look at. Good use of “film” sad and frustrating theme.
