- Wacky fun – thank you.
- Excellent – the best for a long time.
- Beautifully done.
- Loved it. Thank you committee! The spirit of Jacque Tati resonant if you know Le Have, but I think the film gave you a picture... It was wonderfully 'fey' and full of empathy for the marginalised and funny with it, the opposite of the kind of denigrating humour we unfortunately see more of. And the baby gets an Oscar. Oh yes, the dancing! And singing! Totally wonderful.
- Even better 2nd time!
- Great Fun.
- Superb
- Very funny. I loved the car chase with the baby on the boot.
- Marvellous.
- Keaton, Lloyd and Chaplin would be so happy to see their skills still being used in films today. Great fun.

- Some truly funny parts. The couple were very endearing and their dances and gymnastics were amazing- but keystone cop chases are just not funny.
- Daft but funny.
- Beautiful and funny
- 10 out of 10 for pure fantastic imagination. Put 'Strictly' into 2nd place with the dancing.
- Weird.

- Nice to see there's still a place for physical comedy in film.
- Bizarre, but very entertaining.
- Funny let Dom be Chancellor and send Osborne to France. If he does not speak French he will be silent.
- Thoroughly watchable.
- Zany but good fun and very well acted. A lot of familiar humour from preceding years quite apparent.
- What fun to have an excuse for suspending disbelief.
- Very funny only criticism: a bit slow in places. Nice surreal scenes.
- Still not sure I believe in fairies but the film was pure magic!
- An enjoyable bit of froth for the festive season. Some seriously funny moments interspersed with bizarre activity.
- Very entertaining. Light-hearted for a change. More like this please!

- Zany- good example of the need to suspend disbelief from time to time.
- A good bit of escapism. Great performances by the baby and dog!!
- Unbearable lightness of biking. Marty Feldman on come back trail.
- Some good jokes but longish periods of boredom.
- Interesting!

'Satisfactory': 1 vote

- Not too keen on slapstick but it is a Christmas choice after all.

'Poor': 1 vote

- Awful
