- 2nd viewing meant I could understand it. Very beautiful and sound track allowed ideas to flow.
- Very touching. Cinematography sadly marred a little by a couple of slightly muddy, fuzzy reels. But real food for thought. If they're offering Oscars to dogs, then I think they have serious competition from that buffalo!

- Enigmatic.
- Certainly introduces new concepts to a western mind. V. difficult to compare with any thing ever seen before.
- I didn't expect to enjoy this film at all, but found it fascinating – strangely mesmerising to watch and thought-provoking too.
- Up to the mark, I loved the calm acceptance of life/death human/animal and wonderful calm – but then: also had problems with monkey (not sure what last word was).
- Relaxed into it a start (almost dozed) then went with flow. Liked it.

- New category, please! One day I'll be able to 'categorise' it – v. interesting!
- Satisfactory - 1
- Very disappointed.

'Poor': 12 votes

- I tried to last out to the end, having never walked out on a film before, but sitting outside on my own was more entertaining.
- For me it was like purgatory. There must be a better way for the Director to get their point across – and for all these European institutions to get tax relief.
- Badly shot, badly edited, dull – probably the worst film I have seen.
- Dire!
- Probably one of the worst films I have ever watched! Very slow and boring.
- Waste of time!
- The quote of almost intolerably slow is an understatement.
- Very boring. I'm not into ghosts.
- Rubbish.

- Quite an ordeal.
- What was that about? Remind me not to swim in the river!

- I think I need to see it again.
