- The young actresses were excellent (given their lack of acting experience), even as the story got darker, their spirit shone through.
- Shows the huge divide between different cultures.
- Beautifully realised. Acting great. Well shot. But all the 'goodies' – all lovely, the 'baddies' grey/brown/unattractive.
- So grateful that I didn't have five daughters!
- Beautiful acting & the worst thing is that it could be happening as we speak. How to convey cruelty with humour and sensitivity.
- The younger girl showed amazing resilience.
- Entertaining fairy-tale
- Makes you think! Very well acted
- Wonderful film, humour, drama, everything. Best film so far
- A little gem of a film – my favourite of the season, so far.
- 2nd time this year, by choice. Glad I stayed on.
- Like the Scops Owl!
- I thought the score was excellent (and then realised at the end it was by Warren Ellis. Think he is one of Nick Cave's Bad Seeds). Occasionally very funny, often moving and beautifully acted by the young cast.
- Happy & sad & beautiful & moving.
- Another excellent Turkish film. Poignant – very well acted – real sense of place/landscape – very moving.
- Lovely film. Sensitive subject handled with a light touch.
- Loved it. Great portrayal of human resilience. Amazing performances from the young cast.
- Beautiful naturalistic cinematography. Girls were fab. So glad I didn't read review beforehand. Music too just added to film. {Posted on Facebook}

- Very worthwhile – glad I made the trip out on a cold night.
- Sad, beautiful – a comment on women's lack of choice and future.
- Cool... Yeh freedom!
- An interesting exploration of 'culture' and 'civilisation' – a touch of the 'Thelma & Louise's', and much to read into the ending. Most enjoyable.
- Funny & tragic

- Beautifully filmed & acted – but story highly school girlish and a little unlikely – what guardians would put up for so long? & so patiently? – but well worth making the film to show something of the culture impacted/impacting with Western ideas.
