Monday 19 October OUR LAND dir Orban Wallace UK 90 mins

This film shows us a campaigning group with a simple, reasonable aim: to give walkers in England and Wales the same rights that people have had in Scotland, courtesy of the Scottish Outdoor Access Code under the Land Reform (Scotland) Act of 2003. In Scotland, therefore, walkers have the right to temporary, non-motorised access - which is to say walking, cycling and camping, carried out responsibly - to most land, public or private. These rights have now existed for some time without the apocalyptic end to the countryside as we know it. But Scotland isn't England, or Wales for that matter. See what you think! And do read Peter Bradshaw's amusing review of this film on the internet: Our Land Guardian film review.
